Drums, 2nd floor of the Brown Family House of Learning. Drums are made from animal hides and used in ceremony and celebrations. The white, red, black and yellow represent the four colours of humankind working together to protect and care for the earth. The feathers help move the air and carry our prayers to the Creator and offer protection.

Secwépemc Territory Markers represent important places, historical events, and also act as boundaries/guides. The Secwépemc Territorial Marker located in Old Main at the Faculty of Law entrance honours Secwépemc people and the traditional lands on which TRU resides. Created by Secwépemc artists Rod & Ron Tomma, Mike Peters, and Ed Jensen.

On the cover:

In Secwépemc oral history, the wolf—or Mélemstye in the local Secwepemctsin dialect—teaches people to hunt, and the important qualities a hunter needs to be successful: patience, vigilance, alertness and an understanding of the environment, among other things. The same qualities are important for a successful student who, like the hunter, must devise a strategy to reach their end goal.

The Indigenous Education image shows Seklép (Creator, Trickster, teacher) on his educational journey at TRU. This image is synonymous with Indigenization and represents working in partnership & supporting one another.

The dark blue on the outside represents Séwllkwe (Water), the green represents Specéc (Air), the brown represents the Tmicw (Land), the orange represents the Skwékw7es (Sun) and the yellow represents the Mégcen (Moon)

TRU is proud to host the highest number of Indigenous students of any BC post-secondary, with 11% Indigenous (First Nations, Métis) students at Kamloops campus (approximately 3,000), 30% at the Williams Lake campus, and 6% taking classes through Open Learning. TRU's service area includes over 80 First Nation bands and includes Métis organizations.

On the back cover:

The Gathering Place for Indigenous students at TRU Williams Lake campus follows the design of a Secwepemc traditional winter home.
